Introduction

Stoneleigh Communications specialises in helping clients to find the right words to reach the right people in the right way.

Stoneleigh Communications was set up in January 2004 and has built up a number of strong long-term client relationships over the years as well as enjoying fascinating project work with a range of start-up businesses and new clients.

"I enjoy being part of the extended team of an organisation, getting involved in the planning and strategy as well as the implementation and practical graft of effective communications. My scientific background has proved useful in the energy, engineering and more technical sectors while the base in Cumbria has opened up opportunities to broaden the markets for my skills." Sally Seed

Capabilities

Recent projects have included web content, brochure texts, video scripts, press releases, marketing communications, newsletters and social media inputs, all with a clear purpose and written to achieve a clear business objective.

Sally Seed's background is in corporate communications with a Swiss-based international speciality chemicals company and her clients now include organisations from the energy, engineering, chemicals, tourism, voluntary, rural development and craft sectors.
